Welcome To Our August Issue

Editor's Letter

It's holiday time once again and many of you will be looking forward to taking that well deserved break from your usual routine.

Does the Bible have anything to say about holidays? Well actually, yes, it does:

Mark 6: 30-32

The apostles gathered round Jesus and reported to Him all they had done and taught. Then, because so many people were coming and going that they did not even have a chance to eat, he said to them, "Come with me by yourselves to a quiet place and get some rest."

So they went away by themselves in a boat to a solitary place.

The French word for holidays is "vacances" and, of course, the Americans call it "vacation", both words stemming from the root word, "vacate". From time to time we have a need to vacate our minds, switch off from everyday life and leave behind the pressures of work and/or school. We need to refresh our minds and replenish our energy levels. This is essential to our wellbeing both physically and mentally.

Even if we haven't got sufficient money for a holiday away from home, we can still enjoy a "staycation" and take walks around our beautiful countryside and coastal areas in Sefton. For the children, there are a great many museums and art galleries in Liverpool and on The Wirral, all completely free.

Enjoy your summer,

Colette

Thank you for your welcome!

Thank you so much to everyone for your wonderful welcome to St. Stephen's Hightown for me and my family, from before my licensing service on 25th June, in getting the vicarage and grounds ready, to the wonderful 'Welcome Reception' after my collation. We have all appreciated it so much. It's been lovely to meet so many folks already.

It's really fitting that the Holy Gospel, for my first Sunday here with you, sees Jesus telling his disciples:

"Whoever welcomes you, welcomes me and whoever welcomes me, welcomes the one who sent me".

+Matthew 10:40

Welcome was, and is, important to Jesus. One of the things that attracted me to discern a calling here, was the welcome I had received from the congregation whilst helping out during the vacancy. During that time, it was clear that 'welcome' is really important to the church community here. We claim on our website to be "welcoming and joyful in worship". I believe we are! If you have not been to St Stephen's for a while, or never been and don't attend anywhere else, then come and see us at one of our Sunday or midweek services. You will be very welcome.

Best wishes and God bless,

Keith

Congratulations!

to Michaela and Paul who were married in St Stephen's Church recently.

We wish them every happiness for their future together.

Tuesday Group

Beryl has been running the Tuesday Group for many years with the help of Jan and Robin. It is a group for women and men of any denomination or no denomination, from Hightown or not from Hightown. They meet every Tuesday morning for coffee, a chat and usually a quiz. They enjoy organised outings to a variety of places and occasionally will have a guest speaker.

Recently, it was Jan's birthday and they celebrated with cake and home-made chocolate cookies made by a young parishioner who wanted to contribute to her local community. They were very much appreciated. Thank-you, Lizzie!

Words of Hope

By Revd Canon Doctor Rod Garner

A very early start last Thursday morning. The alarm rang at 5.45am in order to drive to Chester cathedral for the funeral of a young woman I had the privilege of baptising over thirty years ago. Caring relationships lie at the heart of ministry and frequently extend over a generation. This was an unexpected death leaving a husband, two young children, and grandparents to face a devastating loss. The cathedral choir turned out for the service. Becky had been a valued chorister for a number of years with a powerful voice. Her husband, again a talented musician, played a tribute piece on the piano that he had chosen for the occasion. Her father spoke movingly of a daughter who had made a significant contribution to the Chester community through her legal work, often representing clients ill-equipped to face life or the requirements of the law. Solemn words were spoken throughout the service: prayers, readings and psalms reflecting a belief that love is never finally lost, not even in the face of that which all fear most. Over refreshments afterwards, there was time to reminisce and ponder what the future now held for Becky's family. Despite the sadness of a life still rich with promise taken too soon, there were smiles and laughter as precious and telling moments were recalled. With fewer baptisms and marriages now taking place, a funeral is often the only time when families and friends come together to remember and celebrate what they once shared.

The sun shone as we drove back from the cathedral. It was now approaching lunchtime so we stopped at a village cafe for a short break. Halfway through, in came three bikers – older guys with the helmets and all the gear, and some lovely, shiny machines parked outside. Spotting my dog collar, one immediately cautioned his mates: 'Watch your language lads, it's the vicar!' Quite a bit of banter followed between us as they sat at the next table. The most talkative and combative had lots of questions and criticisms of organised religion: it was the cause of wars, full of hypocrites, disproved by science etc, etc... All familiar objections that I either agreed with or tried to answer. But we needed a lot more than fifteen minutes. The second biker found our conversation amusing and said his mate was always like this. The third amigo was fairly quiet but mused that his general rule was that life was beyond understanding and you had to live each day as best you could without help or explanation until it was over, end of. There was little point in fretting over imponderable questions.

We parted amicably, probably never to meet again but in some small way changed a little by this brief encounter. I warmed to their enthusiasm and obvious regard for each other, the pleasure they took in their machines, and their passion for the open road. Slippers and a warm fireside seemed far from their thoughts or ambitions. They were manifestly alive and happy to be so. A week on however, I'm left pondering what their reaction might have been to the death that I had commemorated with others earlier that morning. Seizing the day and sharing friendship and the ride while it lasts are good things. But when the wheels come off and there is blood on the tracks what sort of words are available then to mend what has been broken or taken? What kind of hope might be offered when the journey ends prematurely or tragically and death closes down the horizon?

SALMON IN A PARCEL/SAUMON EN PAPILOTE

This is a quick and easy way to cook fish and looks spectacular when served for a special meal. I have used salmon but also whole sea bass fillets but any delicate white fish would do. The parcels can be prepared in advance and kept in the fridge until it is time to cook them. Serve in the parcels but take care when opening them as hot steam may rush out.

Ingredients

5 sticks of celery, finely sliced

4 shallots, finely sliced

A bunch of flat-leaved parsley, chopped

Sea salt

Freshly ground black pepper

1 lemon cut into 6 wedges

6 salmon fillets, skinless (or other fish)

Method

Heat the oven to 200C/gas 6. Cut six 25 cm circles out of baking parchment. I use a large dinner plate as a template.

Put the celery and shallots in a bowl, add the parsley and seasoning and mix well.

Arrange the circles on the work surface. Place a spoonful of the vegetable mixture in the middle of each paper and top with a fish fillet and a wedge of lemon. Close up each parcel, securing the contents by twisting the paper above the fish like an old-fashioned purse or Cornish pasty. Place on a baking tray and bake for 15 minutes. Serve in the paper parcels with boiled new potatoes and a selection of green vegetables.
